

ABSTRACT

A method to recover components of a sputter target assembly having a target bonded onto a backing plate is described. The method includes hydriding the tantalum or niobium target to a tantalum hydride or niobium hydride, respectively and then separating the tantalum hydride or 5 niobium hydride from the backing plate. Sputter targets are further described as well as subsequent process steps.